

Employees strike gold at Shilling

Too often in the pensions industry we hear stories of people investing in companies. But what of companies investing in people, I hear you cry? Where are they?

Well, fear no more, dear reader, because employee benefit consultant Shilling Communication has just joined an elite group of firms deemed to be premium employers of workers.

The organisation Investors in People, which helps businesses get more from their employees, has awarded Shilling its 'gold status' award, which is achieved by only 1.23% of the firms in London and the south east that IIP grades.

IIP representative John Telfer said: "This is a fantastic achievement for Shilling Communication. In achieving gold status, they have proved themselves to be among the best Investors in People organisations in the country.

"I hope that news of their success will encourage others in the communications sector to follow their example and use the IIP framework to help realise their business goals and ambitions."

Shilling Communication managing director Kevin Shilling said: "While there are many awards in our industry that people yearn for, the IIP award has always been, for me, the most important for us to win. For us to achieve gold status is incredible – it is not to be underestimated."